FOREWORD

2033509

It is realized that these genealogies are not complete and that further research would supply more and earlier data. It was felt, however, that "Prideaux Families" in the present form and at the present time would be more welcome than a more complete compilation some years hence. With this in mind, the volume is so bound that information can be added to the present pages or additional pages may be inserted.

As in many genealogies, very little attempt has been made to follow the line of descent thru the female descendants. No attempt has been made by this compiler to include other than generations in America with but a reference to ancestry in Cornwall.

Special thanks are due Blanche Prideaux Turner, Elizabeth Pew Prideaux, Juanita Prideaux Zahler, Merope Ourat Prideaux, Evelyn Prideaux Smith, Arthur J. Prideaux, Harry F. Prideaux and the many whose cooperation made this compilation possible.

The small letters appearing in the coats of arms and the crests indicate the colors and is the first letter(s) of the heraldic word for the metal or color:

Or, gold	Argent, silver	Azure, blue
Gules, red	Sable, black	Vert, green.

Librarians and historical or genealogical societies will be of considerable help in further research. Earlier Prideaux genealogies are available at the Library of Congress. The "Pedigree of the Family of Prideaux of Luson in Ermington, Devon" by T. Engledue P. Prideaux in 1889 covers the period from the time of the Norman Conquest. Photocopies may be obtained thru Duplication Service, The Library of Congress, Washington 25, D.C. who will furnish order blanks and quotations upon request.

Photoduplication Service will also furnish copies of pages 218 to 241, inclusive, of Volume II of "The Parochial and Family History of the Deanery of Trigg Minor" by Sir John MacLean in 1876. These pages are seven pedigrees and a chart indicating the "Royal Descent of Prideaux."

PRIDEAUX PLACE, PADSTOW, CORNWALL, ENGLAND

"Roger, the third son of Humphrey Prideaux of Thuborough, the founder of his own fortune, purchased Soldon, in the parish of Holdsworth, and made it the residence of the family; he became Sheriff of Devon in 1580. His eldest son, Sir Nicholas Prideaux, purchased the manor of Padstow and died in 1627 at an advanced age, having erected Place about the year 1600."

The history of Trigg Minor by Sir John MacLean, in 1876 traces the "Royal Descent of Prideaux" from "Rhys ap Tudor Maur, Prince of South Wales, eleventh in direct descent from Caldwalader the last King of Britian, sl 1090."

"Paganus de Prideaux vel Pridias, Lord of Prideaux in Luxullion near Fowey, county Cornwall, before the Conquest, living at Prideaux Castle," is the ancestor of the "Family of Prideaux of Luson in Ermington, Devon."

"Playfair has given the most plausible account of the origin of the name Prideaux. The name itself is, apparently composed of the French words, Pres (near) and d'eaux (waters); which compound, supposing it to be the sirname of Prideaux, was at an early period changed to Priddeaux or Pridiaux or Prideaux; for in Cornwall, in the hundreds of Powder and Pider, there are two places severally called Priddeaux hart, in the former hundred, and Prideaux magna, in the latter one, which may have either given the name to the Prideaux family, or derived their designation from it."

"The name of Pridias is evidently of Celtic origin, the termination "as" being a common one in that language, and the name has been and still is always pronounced in Devon and Cornwall as "Pridicks."

"The members of the Prideaux family have been so numerous and have spread so extensively in the County of Devon as to justify the probability that many families there, now bearing the same name, are descended from the younger branches of Prideaux of Thuborough."

"Family tradition has it that the family originated in Normandy and two brothers came over with William the Norman in 1066. One brother stayed up at court, the other was sent with an army down to conquer Cornwall. Instead the Cornish conquered him. It is rather remarkable that the correct spelling (French for "Prize of Waters") has persisted thruout the years. However in some places I found the Cornish pronouncing it "Priddix."

(Arthur John Prideaux, 1950)

"There were two distinct branches of Prideaux in Mineral Point, Wisconsin. There must have been quite a few families for there is section called "Predix Hollow" where they all settled. Mineral Point was also known as Shake Rag Town because at mealtime dishcloths were waved to call the Cornish miners home from the mines. Some of the Cornish houses on Shake Rag Street in Mineral Point are still standing."

PRIDEAUX

JOHN PRIDEAUX, Bishop of Worcester, Rector of Exeter College, Dean of Norwich, Chaplain to Prince Henry, King James I and King Charles I, the fourth son of John and Agnes Prideaux, was born at Stowford in the parish of Harford near Ivybridge on September 17, 1578, died July 29, 1650 at Bredon and was buried in the chancel of the church there on August 15, 1650.

An original portrait of John Prideaux, Rector of Exeter College is still to be seen in some part of Exeter College, Oxford. There are also minatures in existence of John Prideaux, Serjeant at Law, and his son, but they are not known which is which, unless the dress of the period would decide the point. Of the celebrated Dean of Norwich many portraits are extant; the most valuable is probably that now at Prideaux Place, Padstow.

SIR EDWARD PRIDEAUX of Netherton, the first Baronet, studied law in the Inner Temple where he became very eminent for his skill and learning. He had two sons, Sir Peter his successor and Edmund who "was bred to the law, and of so great a reputation, as well as a zeal for religion as skill in the law, it is not strange that he was chosen a Member of that which was called the Long Parliament, where he became a very leading man; for, striking in with the prevailing part of those times (tho he never joined with them in setting upon the life of his Sovereign) he grew up to great wealth and dignity. He was made commissioner of the Great Seal worth 1500 pounds a year and ordinance of Parliament practiced with the bar as one of the King's counsel worth 5000 pounds per annum. After that he was Attorney General worth what he pleased to make it and then Postmaster General." Prideaux cannot be called the inventor of the Post Office although to him may be attributed the extension of the system.

JOHN PRIDEAUX, Brigadier General, was born in Devonshire in 1718, the second son of Sir John Prideaux, sixth Baronet, of Netherton Hall near Honiton, Devonshire. He entered the British Army and rose to the rank of Brigadier General. He commanded the expedition sent in 1759 to capture Fort Niagara from the French during the French and Indian Wars in America. He was killed during the siege of the fort on July 19, 1759 a few days before the fort surrendered. He was buried in the chapel of the fort on July 29, 1759. His elder brother, Sanderson Prideaux, a lieutenant in Colonel Moreton's marines, died at Cartengena in 1751.

THE REVEREND CHARLES PRIDEAUX-BRUNE of Prideaux Place, county Cornwall and of Plumber, county Dorset, born in 1760, married, in 1794, Frances, daughter of Thomas Patten of Bank Hall in Lancashire. On the death of his uncle, Charles Morton Pleydell Drune, in 1785, he succeeded to the Brune Estates, and in conformity with the testamentary injunction of his Maternal Great Uncle Charles Brune, assumed the name and arms of Brune, in addition to those of Prideaux.

Extracts from and David Hamilton Feathers' marginal comments on "The Great Rebellion," J. T. Headley, National Tribune, 1898.

"Our regiment arrived at Stone River shortly after the battle and remained at Murfreesboro for several months. I brought home a sword found on the battlefield."

To protect railroad bridges, General Sherman had small bombproof block houses, or fortifications, built near them, as he advanced, large enough to hold a few hundred men, and provisioned for a long time. "Our regiment was occupied in this work part of the spring of 1864."

June 22nd, 1864, Rebel General Hood made a sudden attack on Hooker's Corps. Driving in the advanced detachments, he fell furiously on Williams' division. The onset was fierce but failed. "Our regiment, the 31st Wisconsin,* was in Williams' division."

July 20th, 1864, during the fighting near Atlanta, the rebels threw themselves forward on our batteries with a recklessness that was frightful to behold. They lost, in this short engagement, five thousand men. For half an hour, the two armies fought face to face each side of the same line of entrenchments with the battle colors of the respective parties flying from the same works. The dead lay everywhere, sometimes in ranks as though whole companies had been swept away by a single volley. The rebel loss was estimated at twelve thousand. Our loss was only a little over seventeen hundred.

"Hood assaulted our lines four ranks deep, his men mowed down like grass. After the third assault he retired, leaving his dead for us to bury. We found whiskey in nearly all the rebel canteens of the dead, which accounted for their recklessness."

Our greatest loss was the death of General McPherson, who fell while crossing a piece of woods. "Was killed a ½ mile to our left."

The Twentieth Corps ("Corps I was in") was dispatched to Sherman's entrenched bridge on the Chattahoochee River. Hood's army was fast melting away and he hastily evacuated Atlanta, blowing up magazines. Slocum, of the Twentieth Corps, seven miles north on the Chattahoochee, heard the explosions. Atlanta was found to be deserted and he marched in and took possession of it.

---

* Benjamin T. Prideaux, John Leece and Richard Prideaux were members of Captain Burdick's Company, later "C" Company, of the 31st Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry.

November, 1864 Sherman's March to the Sea from Atlanta.

The Twentieth Corps, commanded by Major General H. W. Slocum, marched along the railroad to Augusta, a hundred and seventy miles, passing thru Madison. "A guard was placed around Rebel General Floyd's place. Mrs. Floyd and Miss Mollie Floyd invited six of us boys (escort headquarters of the 20th Corps) to dinner at the Floyd mansion at Madison."

From Madison, Geary's division of the Twentieth Corps marched on the Oconee River. On November 21st, 1864, Slocum entered Milledgeville, the State Capitol. At Sandersville, enroute to Savannah, Rebel General Wheeler made a stand, but after a brief action fell back to Waynesboro, only thirty miles south of Augusta, whither Kilpatrick followed him. Wheeler now attacked in turn but was repulsed with a loss of two hundred men. "The only fight I witnessed on the march."

Sherman received a message that Savannah was evacuated and on the morning of the 22nd, rode into the city of Savannah. The surrender of the place was made to Geary who was placed in command of the city. "Our regiment was in Geary's division."

Grant, in reply to Sherman's request to march to the sea, said "If you were to cut loose, I do not believe you would meet Hood's army, but would be bushwhacked by all the old men, little boys and such railroad guards as are still left at home."

"I received a shot from one of the 'little boys' a twelve year old, one of Governor Brown's Pets, as they were termed."

March 18th, 1865, General Slocum, commanding the Twentieth Corps, suddenly found himself confronted by the whole of Johnston's army near Bentonville and hurried forward at their utmost speed two divisions under General Williams. In the last charge of six successive attacks in less than hour, the enemy broke Slocum's line but it quickly rallied and charging in turn drove him back. So close and desperate was the combat that many of the rebel dead lay within our lines, and even around the headquarters of the Generals.

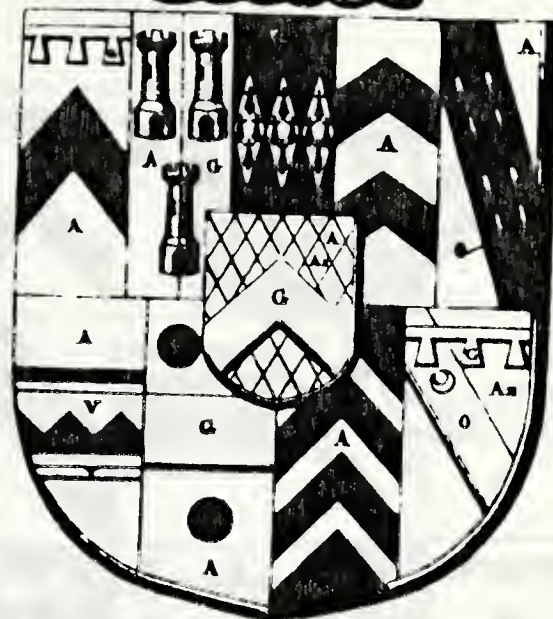

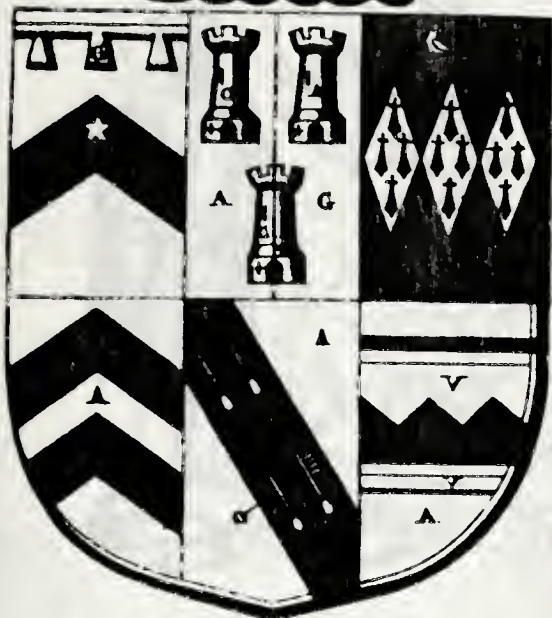

"Bentonville was the most severe engagement our regiment was in."
"I mention affairs of the March to the Sea" more than other matters, because I knew more of it, being one of "Sherman's Bummers."

STEPHEN PRIDEAUX

I James Prideaux, eldest son of Stephen Prideaux, 1785-18 , was born in Cornwall, England, on July 5, 1809, and came to America in 1832. He served as a Private in Company "I", 2nd Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. "My father told us that originally there were three Prideaux brothers that came over to England at the time of the Norman Conquest and fought in the Battle of Hastings in 1066. One brother was killed in battle, one returned to France from whence he came, and the third remained in England."

--; Annette B. Prideaux.

RICHARD PRIDEAUX - ELIZABETH MICHELL

Francis Prideaux, third son of Richard Prideaux and Elizabeth Michell Prideaux, was born at Camborne, Cornwall, England, and was christened on January 12, 1806. He married Sara Sims at Camborne on August 13, 1826.

He brought his family to America in 1837 on the sailing vessel "Caroline", landing at Philadelphia, the voyage across the ocean taking ten weeks. The family traveled across the state of Pennsylvania by team and took a boat for St. Louis, landing there on July 4, 1837. They then sailed north, landing at Galena, Illinois, located on the Fevre River. In those days the river was deep enough and wide enough for the largest river steamers to dock at Galena. They moved to Peddlers' Creek, now known as Linden.

In 1839, they moved to Dodgeville, Wisconsin, later they lived at Council Hill and at Apple River, Illinois. In June 1847, the father died and the mother and the children returned to Dodgeville and lived in a log cabin in Lamblead.

RICHARD PRIDEAUX - ELIZABETH MICHELL

Francis Prideaux, eldest son of Francis Prideaux, 1806-1847, and Sara Sims, was born at Camborne, Cornwall, England, on November 11, 1831 (Oct. 26, 1831?). He came to Wisconsin with the family in 1837 and in 1853 went to the copper mines on Lake Superior, returning to Dodgeville two years later. He then went to the California gold fields in 1855 where he joined his brother Richard who had gone there via the Isthmus of Panama. He was followed in 1859 by his brother John. In 1865, after ten years and three months in the gold fields he returned to Dodgeville.

On June 10, 1867, at Dodgeville, Wisconsin, he married Susan A. Treloar, the fourth daughter of William Treloar. She was born at Dodgeville in March 1841 and died at Milwaukee, Wisconsin on Dec. 24, 1928. The officiating clergyman at the wedding was his cousin, the Reverend James Sims, pastor of the Methodist Church.
